

Perpetual Adoration

The Sower and the Seed

Our Savior says that the thorns which choke the seed are nothing else but the deceitful riches, the van cares and solitudes of this life, the pleasures and satisfactions of the world, which completely stifle the Word of God and the good inspirations sown in our souls, hindering them from bearing any fruit. "Riches are indeed thorns," says Saint Gregory, "for with the pricks of their vain solitudes they tear the poor soul; and when they have led it into sin, they make a cruel wound which bleeds pitifully." ...

[We are to dedicate our soul] with great courage, care and diligence to the exercise of the virtues; these, like so many beautiful, rare, and fragrant flowers, will blossom forth there, making of the soul a delightful garden bed; and by their sweetness and exquisiteness they will attract the heavenly Spouse. He is so kind and gracious that he will condescend to come down into the soul to take his ease as in a garden of delights, making it his pleasant abode.

There are...three essential virtues, forming three rungs of a ladder whereby we may ascend from one to another: humility, which is the foundation and first step; purity, which is the center and second step; charity, which is the peak and summit of this mystical ladder, over the top of which the Lord is bending. For, in order to reach charity great purity is necessary; and to attain to purity one must pass through humility.
